

Interested in receiving national television exposure for your brilliant invention? Half-hour television show TKO (Technical Knockout) is in search of inventors who are willing to reveal their creations to the world. Just send VHS, DVD, mini DV or Beta footage of your device with an explanation of what it's called, how it works, what it's for and why you think it's the greatest invention since the wheel.

Participants acknowledge that participation in the show will have legal consequences not limited to, public disclosure of their inventions and waiving the right of privacy to the information given and footage taken of the invention. As such participants acknowledge that their provision of material in response to this invitation, and any further use of that material including its inclusion on a broadcast television show, is done of their free will, and that they have taken the necessary steps to understand the legal consequences of the same.
